Dear Mr Picken,

I am writing about the crime you reported to us on 07/12/2022.

The details of this offence have been recorded under the classification of Harassment - without violence (course of conduct) on Crime Reference Number 22/122206/22.

We understand the impact that crime can have and we want to reassure you that the information that you have provided to us is important. It can help us build up intelligence that has a positive impact on detecting and preventing crime. It affects how we deploy our police officers and informs local policing.

As a result of the information that we have been provided with and having reviewed the circumstances of this crime there are no further enquiries we can make and this investigation has been closed. If any new evidence becomes available about your crime this decision may be reconsidered.

The Code of Practice for Victims of Crime sets out the services to be provided by criminal justice organisations.

More information about your entitlements under the victims code and other helpful services can be found here <https://www.victimandwitnessinformation.org.uk/>

It is important that we work together to reduce crime and bring offenders to justice and I would ask that you contact us should you become aware of any further information that you feel may help us to solve your crime or any others.

Contact us via our website:

The impact of being a victim of crime varies from person to person and some people may benefit from additional support. The Victim Advice Line offers emotional and practical support specifically tailored to meet your needs to help you cope and recover from the experience. The service is free, confidential and available to anyone who has been impacted by crime.

This is available in large print on request

A Victim Care Coordinator can discuss your needs with you and agree an individually tailored support plan specific to your personal circumstances and can help with accessing specialist support from other agencies if needed.
